

Crimson Security moves into new headquarters

Melville, NY – June 21st, 2004 UTC – Demonstrating its confidence in the company's future, based on its track record of continuing success, Crimson Security Inc - a leader in information security audits and assessments, announced today they have moved into their new corporate facilities located in Melville Long Island. The new building will provide the additional space requirements created by rapid company growth.

"I am very pleased about moving into a larger facility", said Stuart Levine, President of Crimson Security. "Our success has made it possible for us to make this substantial investment in the future, and these new facilities will give us the headroom for further growth as well as the ability to deliver even better support to our customers worldwide. Beyond that, it will give us the kind of working environment which will allow us to accelerate the development of security training courses as well as further our software development efforts".
